

PRIDE MAGAZINES

THE BIG READER SURVEY

THE TRUTH ABOUT LOCAL MAGAZINES

RUTLAND & STAMFORD

Readers of Rutland and Stamford Pride Magazines have spoken about local magazines — and the results are fascinating...

THE RESULTS

Main: The Pride team took to the streets to gather first-hand insights. We also launched an extensive social media and digital campaign, in addition to running the survey for two months across the Rutland and Stamford editions of Pride Magazine.

Readers described Pride

as “a wonderful magazine,” with “great content” and “beautifully presented.”

THE TRUTH ABOUT LOCAL MAGAZINES

RUTLAND AND STAMFORD

Our readers have spoken and the results are fascinating! Rutland & Stamford Pride is delivered by Royal Mail straight through the letterboxes of the region's most desirable homes. We take enormous pride in that commitment — and remain curious what our readers think, not only about Pride, but also about other local magazines available to them. We wanted to find out more about the readership habits, preferences and choices — what our readers and our community say about us, others, and most importantly, what matters to them. So, we asked readers of Pride and residents of the area to tell us which magazines they receive at home, which they purchase, which they read elsewhere, and what they feel towards those magazines.

"I love Pride Magazine. It's high quality, aspirational, contains good articles about things I'm interested in."

Jo, Edith Weston

WHICH LOCAL MAGAZINES DO YOU CURRENTLY RECEIVE THROUGH YOUR LETTERBOX?

Among our verified Pride readers — residents of council tax bands F, G and H within our delivery area — we asked: 'Which local magazines do you currently receive through your letterbox?'

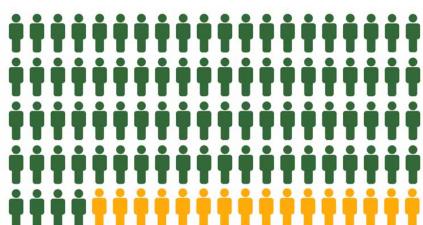

84% said they read every issue of Pride delivered - that's more than our competitors combined!

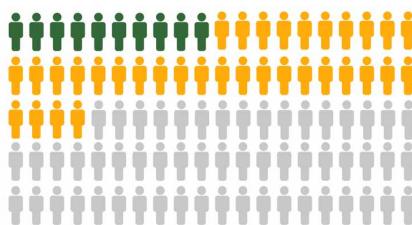

How we gathered the results

To gather breadth and depth of responses the Reader Survey ran across multiple channels. It appeared in the November and December editions of Pride, in several e-newsletter campaigns to reach our subscribers, and through a series of social-media posts inviting community participation to ensure we captured the views of print and digital audiences.

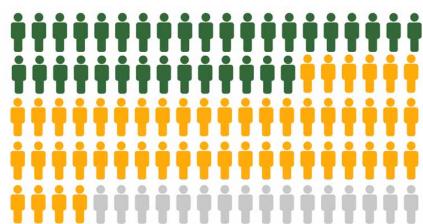

Our team even took to the streets amongst the community — in high-visibility jackets — to gather responses directly from residents. We offered respondents the opportunity to win £1,000 for answering just eighteen questions. The lucky winner chosen at random was able to spend those winnings with any of the businesses that trust Pride with advertising their goods and services...

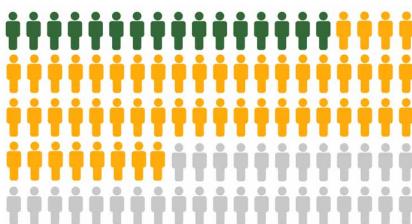

RUTLAND & STAMFORD PRIDE
84% SAID THEY READ EVERY ISSUE
16% SAID THEY READ IT SOMETIMES
0% SAID THEY NEVER READ IT

THE RUTLAND MAGAZINE
10% SAID THEY READ EVERY ISSUE
34% SAID THEY READ IT SOMETIMES
56% SAID THEY NEVER READ IT

STAMFORD & RUTLAND LIVING
34% SAID THEY READ EVERY ISSUE
50% SAID THEY READ IT SOMETIMES
16% SAID THEY NEVER READ IT

ACTIVE MAGAZINE
16% SAID THEY READ EVERY ISSUE
51% SAID THEY READ IT SOMETIMES
32% SAID THEY NEVER READ IT

Above data based on respondents (living in an F, G or H council tax home) who received Pride Magazine through their letterbox answered - 'How often do you read local magazines?'

Percentages may not total 100% due to rounding each response to the nearest whole percent.

It's important to note that all feedback quoted here comes directly from Pride readers.

All comments are taken from verified survey respondents, with evidence of participation retained on file.

THE RUTLAND
MAGAZINE

85% of Pride Readers said they do not receive The Rutland Magazine

The Rutland Magazine

Rutland Magazine says that it delivers "directly into the homes of discerning residents." 85% of Pride readers (who live in high-value homes) say they do not receive The Rutland Magazine. It is unclear how the publishers determine what constitutes a "discerning resident."

The claim that "The Rutland Magazine is the leading luxury lifestyle title distributed in Rutland and the surrounding areas," contrasts with our findings.

The evidence suggests that while The Rutland Magazine may be placed in some public venues, its claimed home delivery does not match the real experience of local residents we surveyed.

We are unsure whether this magazine is still in active publication, as the most recent issue available online dates back several months.

Stamford & Rutland Living Magazine

Stamford and Rutland Living Magazine state that “70% [of their magazines] are delivered door-to-door to high-value homes, and 30% are placed in carefully-selected, high-footfall venues such as premium salons, stylish cafés, independent shops and popular lifestyle destinations.”

Our survey revealed that 53% of Pride readers (whose copies are posted directly to Council Tax bands F, G and H) say they do not receive a copy of Stamford or Rutland Living.

26% OF ALL RESPONDENTS SAID THEY USED TO RECEIVE STAMFORD OR RUTLAND LIVING MAGAZINE BUT THEY NO LONGER DO.

We asked our verified Pride readers and the general public a simple question: do you actually pick up and read magazines in cafés or salons?

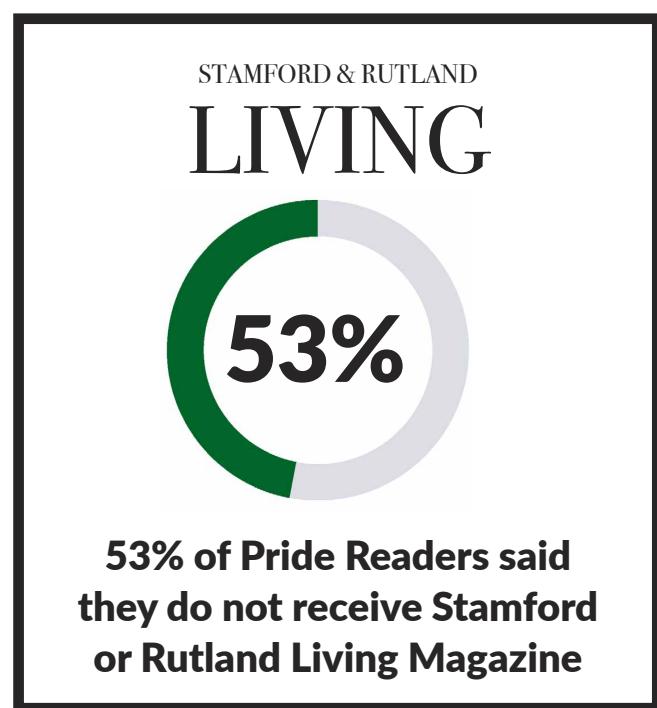

Bulk Drop Circulation

Do you read any local magazines that are placed in cafés, gyms, restaurants, shops etc?

We asked our Pride readers - and the general public who told us:

- 36% Regularly read this way.
- 37% Occasionally do so.
- 19% Rarely would read in these locations.
- 8% Never do.

Active Magazine

Unlike some of the other titles mentioned, Active Magazine does not claim to deliver copies through residents' letterboxes. Instead, it states that copies are placed in public venues — such as supermarkets, gyms, restaurants, pubs, salons, and leisure facilities — where readers may pick up a copy if they happen to see one.

Our reader survey reflects that reality. Only 16% of Pride readers say they read Active Magazine every issue, and the majority of those who do encounter it say they come across it only occasionally in cafés or sports clubs. This indicates that readers are not actively seeking out the magazine, nor are they anticipating each new edition.

Active Magazine is placed in a range of public venues — gyms, supermarkets, restaurants, pubs, salons, and leisure facilities.

Rutland & Stamford Pride: Representing our area

We're genuinely proud — and very grateful — that you've told us Pride reflects Rutland & Stamford so well. In our latest survey, almost every reader said the magazine captures the spirit of the area, from its community and culture to the people, places and stories that make this part of the country unique. Overall, 98% of respondents felt that Pride represents the region well, and that rises to an incredible 99% among F, G and H-band households.

Readers spoke about how much they value seeing local life celebrated: the events, the food, the landscapes, the businesses and the familiar faces that make Rutland & Stamford feel like home. You told us the magazine feels relevant, rooted in the community and connected to what really matters here.

For us, there's no greater compliment. Thank you for sharing how well Pride reflects the area — it inspires us to keep bringing you a magazine that feels proudly, unmistakably local.

Reader Habits: Purchasing Magazines

We wanted to understand the changing habits of our respondents, so we asked how often you buy magazines from a shop or newsagent. The answer was clear: those surveyed generally don't.

Our survey showed that 93% of people never, or rarely, buy a magazine!

Seeing magazines left on retail shelves is therefore unsurprising as our survey shows that people in Rutland & Stamford are increasingly turning their back on purchasing magazines altogether. An overwhelming 93% of respondents told us they only occasionally buy a magazine, or never buy one at all. In the area's most affluent F, G and H-band homes, that figure rises even further to 98%.

“Pride Magazine is delivered to my door and it sits on my kitchen table until I’ve read everything of interest.”

Michael Culpin, Oakham

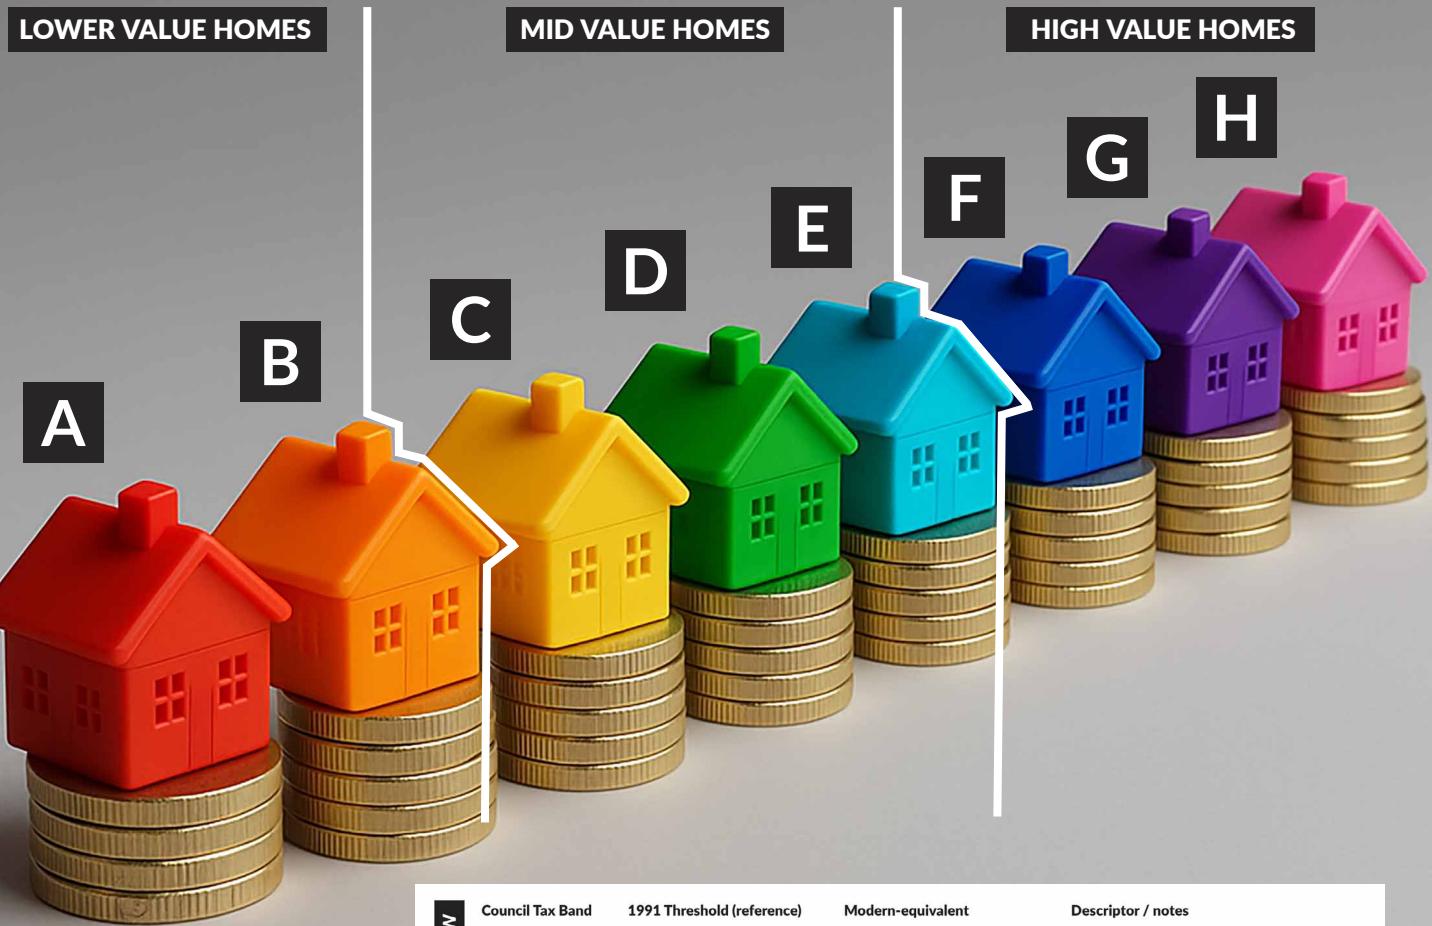

This shift in behaviour reinforces why Pride's model works so well. Instead of relying on chance purchases or casual browse-by habits, we deliver high-quality, relevant content directly into the hands of our readers at home and in the places they visit. Whilst other publications rely largely — or even entirely — on being picked up by chance, Pride is created, curated and delivered directly to homes to ensure our readers don't miss the very best that the area has to offer.

Pride is built for engaged readers — not for the newsstand.

COUNCIL TAX BAND CALCULATOR

Understanding council tax bands, and what is considered a 'high value home'?

PRIDE IS DELIVERED THROUGH
THE LETTERBOXES OF F, G & H
HOMES BY ROYAL MAIL.

		Council Tax Band	1991 Threshold (reference)	Modern-equivalent	Descriptor / notes
	LOW	Band A	~ £40,000	~ £100,000 to £180,000	Very modest / small flats / low value homes
	LOW	Band B	~ £40,001 – £52,000	~ £180,000 to £240,000	Entry-level / lower mid homes
	MID	Band C	~ £52,001 – £68,000	~ £240,000 to £310,000	Mid-market / "normal" homes
	MID	Band D	~ £68,001 – £88,000	~ £310,000 to £380,000	Mid-upper / comfortable family homes
	MID	Band E	~ £88,001 – £120,000	~ £380,000 to £480,000	Strong / upper-middle homes
	HIGH	Band F	~ £120,001 – £160,000	~ £480,000 to £620,000	Upper / premium homes
	HIGH	Band G	~ £160,001 – £320,000	~ £620,000 to £1,200,000	High end / large / desirable homes
	HIGH	Band H	~ £320,000 +	£1,200,000+	Top tier / luxury / exceptional properties

Pride Magazines reaches readers with the highest capacity to spend. The ONS's latest Family spending in the UK bulletin (financial year ending March 2024) shows the average UK household spends £623.30 per week, but spending isn't evenly distributed.

The richest fifth of households spend £948.70 per week, while the poorest fifth spend £378.60—a gap of roughly 2.5x. In other words, the upper end of the market buys substantially more goods and services every week than lower-income households.

That difference isn't just about totals; it's about what gets bought. The ONS notes that in 2023–24 the richest fifth increased their expenditure in real terms, whereas the poorest fifth held flat in real terms, implying trade-downs or reduced volumes among lower-income groups. Meanwhile, poorer households continue to devote a larger share of their budgets to essentials such as housing, fuel and power, leaving less room for discretionary categories where brands differentiate (premium home, fashion, leisure, technology, eating out, and travel).

Affluent households, by contrast, retain more headroom for these categories and still spend the most in absolute terms across almost every area. For a premium advertiser, that's the audience where brand preference translates fastest into revenue.

Spending power is underpinned by wealth. The ONS Household total wealth in Great Britain release shows the wealthiest 10% of households hold £1.2 million or more in household wealth; the top 1% hold 10% of all wealth, the same share as the least wealthy 50% combined.

Showcasing Local Businesses

"I enjoy reading about local businesses, events, local pubs and restaurants in Pride Magazine, which in turn encourages me to go and try them."

Jayne Blomer, Ketton

Our readers are passionate about the place they call home — and nothing reflects that better than the importance they place on local businesses. In the Rutland & Stamford Reader Survey, people told us time and again that they value discovering new independent shops, restaurants, makers and services through the pages of Pride. Many said they rely on the magazine to stay connected to what's happening locally, to find inspiration for where to visit, eat and shop, and to celebrate the success stories shaping our community.

"Pride's promotion of local independent businesses is key, to encourage people to support and use all these companies."

PD, Bainton

Pride's commitment to championing local businesses has always been central to our mission. Whether we're profiling a new artisan, showcasing a family business, or highlighting the incredible talent behind local hospitality, our aim is the same: to bring readers the very best the area has to offer. Supporting our business community supports our wider community — and we're proud that readers look to Pride as a trusted guide to the standout people and places that make Rutland and Stamford special.

The circulation of Pride Magazines has always been transparent - Our editions are professionally delivered by Royal Mail directly into the letterboxes of Rutland and Stamford's most affluent households.

Understanding Magazines Reader Engagement

The survey didn't just reveal which magazines people read and receive — it also showed how they engaged with them.

Our respondents told us that Pride isn't a publication to flick through and discard; it's one they keep, share and discuss.

Many respondents told us they read each issue cover to cover, while others mentioned that copies are passed on to family, friends, or even displayed in offices and waiting rooms — extending every edition's reach far beyond the initial delivery. This engagement underlines why Pride is at the forefront of local publications: not just for its verified distribution, but because it is genuinely read, shared and discussed by the communities of Rutland and Stamford, and trusted by advertisers.

How we scored engagement

In our survey, we asked people to rate local magazines as Loved, Liked, Okay, Not Keen or Don't Read. We then converted these into an Engagement Index with the totals shown below as the sum of all scores for each title—the higher the total, the stronger the engagement.

Engagement Index:

PRIDE:	611 points
LIVING:	454 points
ACTIVE:	324 points
RUTLAND:	252 points

Engagement Index (0–4 scale; 'Don't Read' scored 0). Totals represent aggregated reader sentiment for each magazine.

"I read Pride every month and then take it to the office - six more people read it there."

Trevor Kyte, of Whissendine

Local magazines: Online in the Digital World

Pride Magazines' social media community continues to grow at pace, confirming our position as the region's most-followed local magazine brand. Using the latest November 2025 snapshot from Facebook and Instagram, Pride leads with 36,342 followers, comfortably ahead of other local titles. Stamford & Rutland Living at 16,400, Active at 4,472 and The Rutland Magazine at just 287 Facebook followers.

"I enjoy reading Pride online.
I'm looking to move to Rutland,
so I enjoy reading about the area and events."

Honor Flaherty, Leicester

Why does that matter for readers and advertisers? Social reach amplifies every issue we publish. It drives discovery for new readers, extends the life of stories between print editions, and creates a two-way conversation with the affluent households we serve. Posts showcasing local businesses, venues and experiences routinely achieve strong engagement, helping quality brands cut through the noise with a trusted, lifestyle-led voice.

And accessing Pride has never been easier—or more accessible. While our print editions are professionally delivered by Royal Mail directly into high-value F, G and H council-tax-band homes, everyone can enjoy Pride free of charge online every month extending our reach beyond the area.

Read the full magazine on our website or app, or browse via leading platforms including Readly and Issuu. Articles are optimised for mobile, tablet and desktop, so readers can dip into restaurant reviews, homes and interiors, fashion, society pages and local features anywhere, anytime.

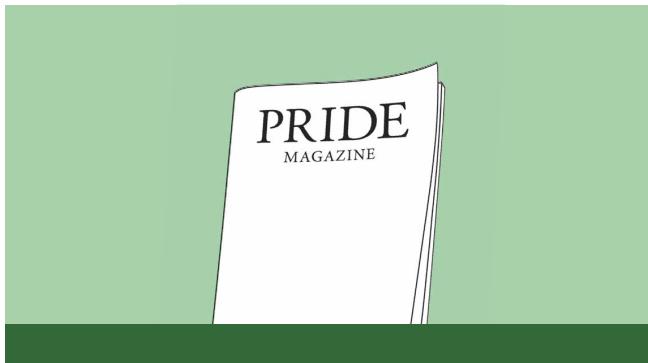

If you're new to Pride, join our online community today and experience the region's best luxury lifestyle content without paying a penny. And if you're a business looking to reach our readers, our unmatched social following — combined with premium print delivery — offers a powerful, proven way to put your brand in front of the right audience.

HOW MANY SOCIAL MEDIA FOLLOWERS (‘FANS’) ON FACEBOOK & INSTAGRAM?

As at November 2025, follower data from Facebook and Instagram was collected for all brands of: Pride Magazines, Living Magazines, The Rutland Magazine, and Active Magazine.

Printed Magazines: Alive and thriving

In a world dominated by digital screens and quick scrolling, print magazines continue to offer something different — a more focused, enjoyable and memorable reading experience. Research shows that physical magazines encourage deeper engagement: readers slow down, take in the photography, and connect more fully with the stories on the page. The tactile feel of the paper, the weight of the product and the intentional act of sitting down with a magazine all contribute to a richer, more immersive experience than digital formats typically provide.

Our respondents reminded us that a physical magazine becomes part of the home — kept, shared and enjoyed.

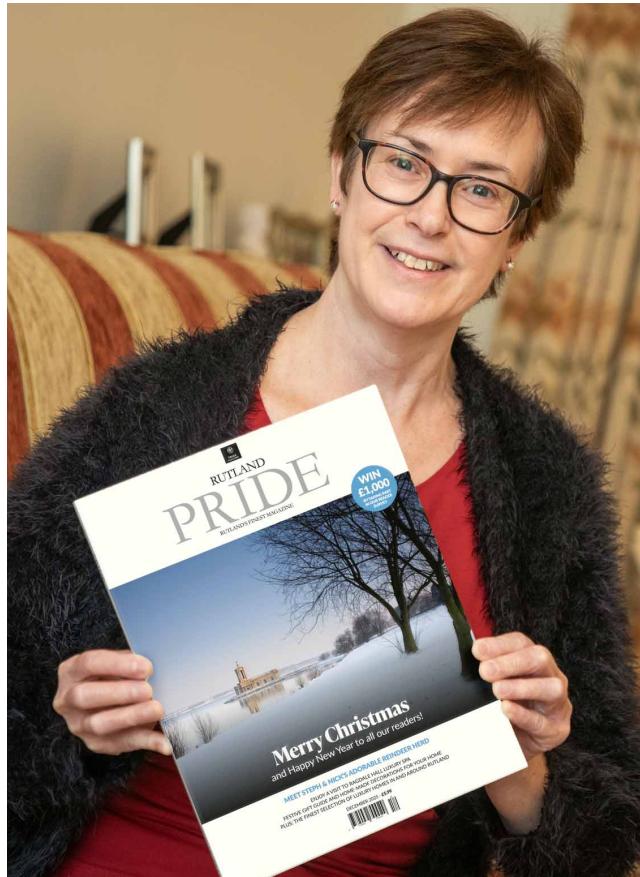

“Love the print format and the paper. Sits very well on my coffee table, visitors from out of area really enjoy reading.”

Marie Slevin, Langham

This sentiment was echoed earlier this year on BBC local radio, when Pride's Editor Rob Davis discussed the future of magazines with presenter Sean Dunderdale. Rob explained that we anticipated the decline in retail magazine sales years ago and moved away from relying on supermarket shelves. Unlike many competitors we invested in direct, free home delivery, ensuring our magazine reaches readers reliably and intentionally each month. Sean noted, and we agree, there is something unmistakably special about a magazine arriving through the door — tactile, personal, and capturing the attention of the reader.

Academic commentary supports this view: the weight of a beautifully produced magazine and the tactile feel of its pages turn reading into an experience, not just content consumption. Paired with high-quality journalism and targeted distribution, print doesn't just endure — it thrives and remains, for us, an absolute joy to produce.

Pride's approach proves it. Thoughtfully made, expertly delivered and genuinely loved by readers, print magazines when carefully and meticulously curated in this way are very much alive and thriving.

Thank you... and congratulations!

A huge thank-you to everyone who took part in The Big £1,000 Pride Reader Survey 2025. Your feedback has been invaluable and helps us continue to improve each and every edition.

Congratulations to Alison Parkinson of Stamford, who was randomly selected from all valid entries and wins £1,000 to spend with any of the advertisers featured in Rutland & Stamford Pride. Alison told us that she loves our articles on food and events and is looking forward to spending her prize at Hambleton Hall.

“I am delighted to win – I love Pride and am originally from Lincoln so I've always enjoyed these fabulous magazines.”

Alison Parkinson from Stamford

If you'd like to promote your business to the wealthiest people in Stamford and Rutland with, by far, the highest verified home-delivery reach to F, G and H homes, contact our friendly sales team on 01529 469977. Because when it comes to reaching the county's most affluent readers — Pride delivers... literally!

More affluent readers. More online readers.
Highest engagement. Transparent circulation.

*Reach the region's most affluent readers - every month.
Over 60,000 engaged readers across print and digital.*

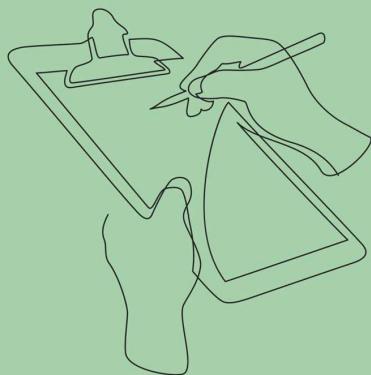

PRIDE MAGAZINES

When you need premium readers, Pride delivers - literally!

w: www.pridemagazines.co.uk
t: 01529 469977 or e: sales@pridemagazines.co.uk

PRIDE
MAGAZINES

THE BIG READER SURVEY

OUR READERS
HAVE SPOKEN

TO ADVERTISE

w: www.pridemagazines.co.uk
t: 01529 469977 or e: sales@pridemagazines.co.uk